This Blog Is About...

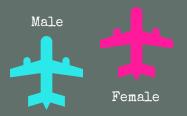

Many sensationalize nomadic travels but fail to show the realities of making those travels happen long term. This is exactly what Nina's blog aims to do. She provides real tangible opportunities and experiences for others to follow so they can travel and live around the world while replenishing their pockets along the way.

Nina's writing is truthful, sassy, and encouraging. Her enthralling voice provides readers with an entertaining read that makes sure to highlight all details and outline useful information for the wannabe wanderluster.

Her travel style is adventurous, outdoorsy, often involves her using her pro beach bum skills where applicable. She often posts up in a region from anywhere from a week to a year+ should her heart fall in love with the surroundings.

So far this Floridian wanderer has fallen for South Africa, Thailand, and Australia making her home in 9 cities and counting. She hopes to call all continents home and makes it a mission to visit and work in as many places as possible in her lifetime while providing the know-how for others to follow in her footsteps.
